Norfolk, VA – Norfolk Festevents presents a new Stay-At-Home Schedule of Events, beginning on Monday, April 27, 2020. Amid the ongoing national, state, and city guidelines to ban large events for the near future, the new series will bring an eclectic variety of family-friendly entertainment and activities to homes across the region through live videos and interactive experiences.

The Festevents Stay-At-Home series, in which participation is free, combines the unique elements of festivals, such as live music, food and beverage tastings, and family fun, and transforms those elements into a virtual format for the community to enjoy in the safety of their own home.

Highlighting the series are live musical performances from local musicians Lewis McGehee, Mike Proffitt, and Michael Lille, as well as live interactive culinary Q&As and educational sessions with one of Hampton Roads' most esteemed food writers and historians Patrick Evans-Hylton. The series also features family-friendly activities, such as indoor scavenger hunts, storytelling, fitness and healthy lifestyle tips, and much more.

A complete two-week schedule of events can be found below.

All events and performances will be streamed live and/or posted on the Norfolk Festevents Facebook page. Norfolk Festevents encourages the audience to interact during live segments with questions and recommendations, as well as their own stories of how they are staying busy at home.

While participation is free and there is no obligation to donate, in an effort to raise funds for future events and festivals, Norfolk Festevents has established a PayPal fundraising campaign. For those who are in a position to help, Norfolk Festevents is tremendously grateful for any contribution. Donations to Norfolk Festevents, a US 501(c)(3) not-for-profit organization, are typically tax-deductible. For those who are willing and able, please donate here.
